Ulrich Medical puts new plant into operation

At the end of May, the moment had finally arrived: Ulrich Medical began operations in its new, recently rented production space near Ulm. More than 30 people will be working there in future.

The move is complete, and production in the new facility is ready to begin: With nearly 1,200 square meters of additional space, Ulrich Medical now has expanded capacity for manufacturing. The new site will produce systems for the contrast media injector product range, which is used in radiology and has been a key growth driver for the company in recent years. At the official opening on May 27, Friedrich von Rechteren, CEO of Ulrich Medical, stated: "With this expansion of capacity, we are once again making a clear commitment to our Ulm location and to its long-term development."

With the additional space, the company is creating room for continued growth.
